Hair Loss?

What is Trichology? Trichology is the scientific study of alopecia (hair loss) and scalp disorder conditions. It's origin was in London England in 1902. The American Academy of Dermatology recognizes the field of Trichology, and currently has one board member who is a doctor of trichology.

A microscopic analysis is vital for all consumers who are concerned about the nutritional health of your hair, and much more. Learn what your hair strands and hair bulb reveals.

MICROSCOPIC ANALYSIS DETECTS THE FOLLOWING:

WHAT WE DO

- Chemical damage present
- Clogged hair follicles
- Damage to the cuticle and cortex layers
- Dirt, build up and bacteria present
- The effects of DHT developing
- Stress to the hair
- Lack of nutrition to the hair
- Heavy sebum build up around the hair root
- Hair shaft defects (there are 36 types)
- Lack of vitamins and proteins in the hair
- Lack of vital nutrition in the hair's dermal papilla
- Lack amino acids and essential acids

To find out the health of your hair, please mail 10 strands of hair in zip lock bag to our clinic for a microscopic analysis. Please include a payment of $160 in the form of a money order or cashier's check.

You may also pay via PAY PAL.
